Shanghai Hong Yue Healthcare Management Company gets international medical tourism certification from US MTQUA.

Shanghai Hong Yue Healthcare Management Company provides high quality medical tourism support and services to people seeking medical treatment outside China.

December 1, 2016 – Shanghai and Scottsdale, Ariz. – Medical Travel Quality Alliance MTQUA has awarded international medical tourism certification to medical travel facilitator and service company Shanghai Hong Yue Healthcare Management Company.

“When Chinese medical tourists go abroad, they should not be treated like ordinary patients,” said Julie Munro, MTQUA president. “When you are in a strange land, away from family and community, you want confidence that the hospital and doctors will look after you. With Shanghai Hong Yue Healthcare Management Company planning your medical trip, you can be sure you will get an international standard of treatment, care and services, and good results at the hospital or treatment center.”

Shanghai Hong Yue Healthcare Management Company underwent a months-long evaluation that included in-depth interviews and a formal review of its operations, processes and procedures against international standards of quality in 10 non-clinical areas that directly influence a medical traveler's wellbeing and outcomes.

The MTQUA evaluation team considered how the company manages a medical tourist through the inquiry process, intake and treatment planning, and care management after discharge. It reviewed the company's website and internet marketing, communications procedures, privacy and security measures, multicultural sensitivity, and care support services and business practices that influence the quality of treatment and care a medical tourist receives.

Hospitals, clinics and agencies in more than 20 countries are certified by MTQUA.
